

Real-time analysis of chromosome and mitotic spindle dynamics in live cells

During mitosis chromosomes are maneuvered and segregated on an extraordinarily dynamic macromolecular machine called the mitotic spindle. This talk will focus on our use of live cell imaging as a means of elucidating the molecular pathways that underlie spindle assembly and chromosome segregation.

David J. Sharp, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor
Department of Physiology & Biophysics
Albert Einstein College of Medicine
1300 Morris Park Ave
Bronx, NY 10461
USA
Office: 718-430-3463
Lab: 718-430-3464